

I strongly support requiring cell phone carriers to let customers take their phone numbers from one carrier to another. This could do more than anything else to promote real phone competition. If landline phone companies stood to lose customers to cell phone carriers, and cell phone companies stood to lose customers to other cell phone companies, customer service and rate competition would be immeasurably boosted.